The Cinque Terra, a remote chunk of the Italian Riviera, is traffic free, lowbrow alternative to the French Riviera. There's not a museum in sight, just sun, sea, sand, wine and pure, unadulterated Italy. There are five villages, Monterosso, Vernazza, Corniglia, Manarola and Riomaggiore that can be reached by walking/hiking trails, train and ferry. You can enjoy swimming, hiking or just checking out each little village. This region is the birthplace of pesto and anchovies are a local specialty. If you you've always hated anchovies try them fresh here.
